Men's nonrevenue coaches take case to Congress

By Ronald D. Mott
THE NCAA NEWS STAFF

In an effort to protect their sports from extinction or severe cutbacks in an era of heightened Title IX compliance, several coaches associations in men's nonrevenue sports have appealed to Washington, D.C.

Led by the National Wrestling

Coaches Association, a "coalition" of nonrevenue-sport coaches associations has blanketed the U.S. Congress with a position paper on gender equity and how it has impacted nonrevenue sports at the intercollegiate level. Included with the position paper is a survey in which lawmakers are asked to indicate their support, or lack thereof, for current gender-related developments in intercollegiate athletics.

What the coaches associations seek is a hearing with officials from the U.S. Department of Education Office for Civil Rights (OCR), which investigates institutions to determine if adequate and equitable opportunities are present for women in athletics under Title IX guidelines. Ultimately, the coaches associations hope to impress upon OCR that it should be just as concerned about preserving opportunities for the growing number of male student-athletes who are being told their institutions are dropping a sport as it is about enforcing equal opportunity for women.

"Our goal is to maintain or increase opportunities for male athletes to compete while increasing opportunities for female athletes to compete under Title IX gender-equity rules," T. J. Kerr, wrestling coach at California State University, Bakersfield, and president of the National Wrestling Coaches Association, wrote in his letter to members of Congress. "...Soon there will

Elders to join Woman of Year dinner

Dr. M. Joycelyn Elders, U.S. surgeon general, will speak at the 1994 NCAA Woman of the Year award dinner November 14 in Washington, D.C.

The dinner at the Grand Hyatt Washington will feature the presentation of this year's NCAA Woman of the Year award to a student-athlete who will be honored for excellence in athletics, academics and community leadership.

Ten finalists for the award were selected in September by the NCAA Special Advisory Committee on Women's Corporate Marketing.

Dr. Elders recently began her second year of service as surgeon general in the U.S. Public Health Service (PHS). She was nominated for the post by President Clinton in July 1993 and won Senate confirmation two months later.

The first African-American to hold the post, Dr. Elders is perhaps the U.S. government's most visible advocate for healthy behaviors.

As surgeon general, she manages the personnel system for the PHS Commissioned Corps, a 6,000-member uniformed service that can be assigned to medical trouble spots as needed.

Among Dr. Elders' other responsibilities is involvement with the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports.

The Schaal, Arkansas, native received a scholarship at age 15 to attend Philander Smith College. Upon graduation at age 18, she entered the U.S. Army as a first lieutenant and received training as a physical therapist.

She graduated from the University of Arkansas Medical School in 1960 and later earned a master of science degree in biochemistry at the school. In 1976, she became a professor of pediatrics at the institution.

In 1987, she was appointed by then-Governor Clinton to the position of director of the Arkansas Department of Health. During her tenure in that post, Dr. Elders emphasized increased immunization for young children, early and regular prenatal care, and HIV testing and counseling services.

In 1992, Dr. Elders was elected president of the Association of State and Territorial Health Officers.

This year's NCAA Woman of the Year awards dinner will be the fourth since the award's creation in 1991.

Robin Roberts, an ESPN sports anchor, will serve as master of ceremonies for the event.

The 10 finalists for the award are invited to the dinner, as are 41 other state-level NCAA Woman of the Year award winners.

Committee discusses sportsmanship; hears views from many perspectives

An NCAA committee examining sportsmanship in intercollegiate athletics gathered information on the topic at an October 19-20 meeting and, as expected, found the matter to be complicated and difficult to address.

The NCAA Presidents Commission Committee on Sportsmanship and Ethical Conduct in Intercollegiate Athletics, meeting in Boston, discussed the issue from the perspective of chief executive officers, conference commissioners, athletics directors and coaches. It also heard from representatives of the four major professional sports, who described what their leagues have done relating to sportsmanship.

Several themes were discussed, among them:

■ Division I programs are responsible for being as economically self-sufficient as possible, and such self-sufficiency is not likely without winning. With winning as the primary incentive, sportsmanship becomes a lesser, even conflicting, priority.

■ Playing rules that punish taunting and fighting will improve conduct, but such improvement is not

Initial eligibility

Fourth season of competition sought for partial qualifiers

The National Association of Basketball Coaches announced October 19 that it supports modifications of the NCAA Presidents Commission's initial-eligibility proposal that will permit partial qualifiers to receive athletically related aid and practice. However, the NABC will favor legislation that provides for partial qualifiers to have the opportunity to earn four seasons of competition rather than three.

The full Presidents Commission proposal, which is endorsed by the NCAA Council, would delay until August 1996 the initial-eligibility index set forth in 1992 Convention Proposal No. 16. That index currently is scheduled to become effective in August 1995. An increase in the required number of core academic courses from 11 to 13 would still go into effect as scheduled in 1995.

The proposal also includes a new partial-qualifier status for student-athletes who achieve a 2.500 grade-point average in the 13 core courses but who do not achieve the required standardized test score of 700 SAT/17 ACT. Those partial qualifiers could receive athletics grants and practice with their teams as freshmen but could not compete.

The current proposal would allow for three years of eligibility for partial qualifiers, but the legislation is structured in a way that will permit Division I delegates to choose between three and four years of eligibility for such individuals.

"With initial-eligibility standards, we create an incentive for prospective student-athletes to pursue excellence in the classroom," said NABC board member Mike Krzyzewski, men's basketball coach at Duke University. "Student-athletes with the satisfactory-progress legislation also have incentives and motivation to achieve, to maintain eligibility and to progress toward their degree."

About partial qualifiers, Krzyzewski said such a student-athlete "should have the opportunity to diligently pursue his academic career and complete his degree while continuing to compete."

Convention

Delegates asked to obtain voting units by January 8

Delegates attending the 1995 Convention in San Diego are requested to pick up their voting units at the Convention site as early as possible and no later than Sunday, January 8.

If voting equipment is picked up early, the Convention staff will be able to test and replace defective units in a more orderly manner. If delegates wait until Monday, time pressures resulting from the division business sessions could pose a problem.

Test votes will be taken at the beginning of business sessions to assure that each unit is working.

A flat registration fee of $100 per person will be charged at the Convention. The only exception will be for individuals representing commercial enterprises, in which case a $200 fee will be assessed.

The registration fee covers delegate entertainment costs, such as the delegates reception, luncheons and the honors dinner.

Registration fees will be collected at the registration counters at the San Diego Mar-

Officers

Nominating Committee tabs Corrigan, Howlett

Eugene F. Corrigan, commissioner of the Atlantic Coast Conference, has been nominated by the NCAA Nominating Committee to succeed Joseph N. Crowley of the University of Nevada as NCAA president at the conclusion of the 1995 Convention in San Diego.

If elected at the Convention, Corrigan would become the first person affiliated with a conference, rather than an institution, to serve as NCAA president since 1937, when the position was filled by John L. Griffith of the Big Ten Conference.

The Nominating Committee also selected Phyllis L. Howlett, associate commissioner of the Big Ten Conference, to succeed Prentice Gautt as NCAA secretary-treasurer.

A nominee soon will be announced for the position of Division II vice-president, to replace Charles N. Lindemann of Humboldt State University.

Legislation

Amendment-to-amendment deadline is November 1

Members have until 5 p.m. (Central time) November 1 to submit amendments-to-amendments for the 1995 NCAA Convention to the national office.

From now until November 1, the Council, Presidents Commission or any eight active member institutions may submit amendments to a proposal for the 1995 Convention. Amendments-to-amendments at this stage of the legislative calendar must adhere to the traditional Association limitation — they are not permitted to increase the change put forth in the circularized proposal.

No amendments-to-amendments may be submitted after 5 p.m. November 1, except that the Council has the authority to submit amendments-to-amendments at the Convention, if deemed necessary.

Restructuring

Divisions I, II task forces to conduct first meetings

The Division I Task Force to Review the NCAA Membership Structure will conduct its first meeting October 27 in Chicago, and its Division II counterpart will begin its deliberations November 1 in Kansas City, Missouri.

The task force review of membership structure began October 9 with a meeting of the Division III task force, which agreed that it will put governance issues before structure in its examination of membership restructuring.

The Division III task force identified simplification, the Association's traditional democratic nature and chief executive officer control among governance issues. Structural issues included federation among the divisions, revenue distribution and championships.

James R. Appleton, president of the University of Redlands, has been appointed as a cochair of the Division III task force, joining Daniel Bridges, athletics director at California Institute of Technology, Appleton

Briefly in the News

Runner shows staying power

Cross country runners are go-all-the-way-to-the-finish-line types. They are long-distance performers. So it's not tough to believe that those characteristics would come in handy in the boxing ring.

Such is the life of Mark Partner, a senior on the cross country team at St. Francis College (Pennsylvania) and a nationally ranked amateur boxer in the 119-pound class. The conditioning that keeps Partner competitive on cross country courses easily transfers to his boxing regimen.

"When we were out at the national championships in Colorado Springs in March, a U.S. boxing official told us Mark was the best-conditioned athlete in the tournament," Ken Partner, Mark's father, told Kevin Southard, sports information director at St. Francis. "Boxing and cross country help to keep his life focused, because both take so much discipline."

Partner has his sights set on a trip to the 1996 Olympics.

"If I don't make it, I'll concentrate on making it in 2000. I have a little more longevity because of my long-distance base," he said.

Partner's freshman season on the running trail did not bring as many rewards as he hoped, but St. Francis cross country coach Debbie White said Partner has improved steadily since arriving. Last year, Partner missed earning all-Northeast Conference honors by just four seconds.

"Mark's not physically as gifted as some of our runners, but he has a different attitude than most of our other runners," White said. "He has a real killer instinct. Boxing has made him very goal-oriented for himself, which in turn has helped the team. When others hit the pain threshold, Mark fights through it. He knows how to compete with pain."

Two pains that Partner experienced in the ring this year were losses to Errid Calheras, a national Golden Gloves champion, and Addaryl Johnson, a junior Olympic title-holder.

"He's got just as good a chance as anyone else," John Robertson, longtime director of the Altoona (Pennsylvania) Boxing Club, said of Partner. "In amateur boxing, you've got to score, and to score you've got to go all out for nine minutes. Mark knows all the punches and he puts them together well."

Cross country and boxing appear to be a formidable one-two punch.

'He's my brother'

Jay Buchanon is described as a huge man with a gentle demeanor. The former West Chester University of Pennsylvania football player once thrived on battling in the trenches as an offensive line player.

Last spring, Buchanon was in a battle for his life. But his sister, Christine, came to his aid and donated one of her kidneys to her brother.

That example of the human spirit led Maria Daniels, wife of West Chester football coach Rick Daniels, to organize Donor Awareness Day at the institution.

When the Golden Rams met East Stroudsburg University of Pennsylvania October 1, Buchanon's sister was honored for her sacrifice. She was presented with a 'One in a Million' pin by West Chester President Madeleine West.

The Danielses both carry organ donor cards and organized a drive to increase the number of card carriers in the Delaware Valley.

Mr. Smith in space

Everyone knows that Mr. Smith goes to Washington. But far fewer realize that Mr. Smith goes to space, too.

That's Steve Smith, former water polo standout at Stanford University, who recently spent 10 days orbiting about 137 miles above the Earth in the space shuttle Endeavour.

The NASA astronaut helped lead the Cardinal to the 1978 and 1980 NCAA Men's Water Polo Championship crowns. He played at Stanford from 1977 to 1980 and led the team in scoring with 20 goals in 1979. He scored 21 goals during his senior season to earn all-American honors.

"Steve was team leader," Dante Dettamanti, Stanford's longtime water polo coach, told Bob Vazquez, Stanford media relations director. "He was a great guy to have on the team. He was a superb athlete, an excellent swimmer, intelligent and (a) great friend to everybody on the team."

Smith wrote Dettamanti after the Cardinal captured the 1993 NCAA title. In his letter he said, "I am writing to thank you for all of your positive influences. My time at Stanford and at deGuerre Pool has led to almost all of my accomplishments."

Dettamanti said he is thrilled with the careers his former players have carved for themselves — particularly his 1980 squad.

"Five players have become doctors, three other players became members of the U.S. Olympic team and one became an astronaut," Dettamanti said. "That's something to be proud of."

Milestones

Pennsylvania State University men's soccer coach Barry Gorman earned his 100th collegiate coaching victory October 7 when the Nittany Lions defeated Northwestern University, 2-1.

Debbie Fore, women's volleyball coach at Francis Marion University, recorded victory No. 100 when the Lady Patriots defeated Queens College (North Carolina), 7-15, 15-12, 15-5, 15-9, October 5 in Charlotte, North Carolina. Fore, who is in her first year at Francis Marion, compiled 88 victories in four years at Coastal Carolina University and three seasons at Susquehanna University.

Frank Marino, volleyball coach at Muhlenberg College, won his 100th victory October 8 in a 16-14, 15-4, 15-9 Mules win over Allentown College of St. Francis de Sales.

Gerry DiBartolo, men's soccer coach at Salisbury State University, posted his 100th career victory as the Sea Gulls recently captured the championship of the First Shore Federal Invitational with a 2-1 win over Christopher Newport College.

Kathy Krannebitter, field hockey coach at West Chester University of Pennsylvania, earned her 100th career victory with a 3-0 shutout of Drexel University September 17.

Student-athletes take part in international forum

Two student-athletes from member institutions got an up-close look at student sport in other countries recently at the International University Sports Federation (FISU) Forum in Sicily.

Brendan Cooney, a senior who competes on the Gordon College baseball and cross country teams, and Laura L. Klingseisen, a graduate student who competed in women's basketball, softball and volleyball at Guilford College, participated in the FISU Forum September 25 through October 2.

This was the second production of the forum, which brought together student-athletes and student sport leaders from around the world to take part in a program focusing on education, recreation and culture. In 1992, Katy Arris, an NCAA swimming champion from the University of Texas at Austin, participated in the first FISU Forum in Paralimni, Cyprus.

Cooney's and Klingseisen's participation was a cooperative venture between the NCAA and the United States Olympic Committee, which provided the funding for the student-athletes' trip.

Cooney and Klingseisen attended the forum with P. Stanley Brassie, secretary of the United States Collegiate Sports Council (USCSC), which is a member of FISU. The NCAA is a member of USCSC; Nora Lynn Finch, associate director of athletics at North Carolina State University, is president of the organization.

"(Making the trip) definitely was worth it," Cooney said. "I recommend it. Just meeting students my age from all over the world and making new friends was a great part of it."

Cooney and Klingseisen participated in discussions focusing on student sport in various countries. Topics included whether student-athletes should receive grants-in-aid for sports participation, whether financial resources should be allocated to elite athletes or mass sport participants and whether national sports committees should be run by students or by professionals.

"Other countries don't have varsity sports like we're used to having," Klingseisen said. "It's almost an intramural-type situation."

"I hate to use that old cliché, but it's like comparing apples to oranges," she said. "In the United States, it (the university athletics system) is more sophisticated, I think because of the money (involved in funding)."

Cooney said, "The focus on student sport in other countries isn't on the university level. A lot of countries have a very developed club level."

College recruiting not a game of chance

By Penny Hastings

Some high-school athletes attract college scouts like bees to honey. They are bombarded with attention from college coaches in the form of letters, phone calls, personal visits and, ultimately, athletics scholarship offers. Chances are the biggest dilemma facing these standout, superstar athletes is which college to choose, rather than how to pay for it.

But what about the rest — the non-“blue-chip” student-athletes who wish to continue to play their sport in college? Certainly not all potential collegiate athletes are blue chippers. So, how do they attract the notice of college coaches and gain athletics scholarships?

These questions are commonly asked today by high-school student-athletes and their parents throughout the country and are the same ones that I asked after my son, Todd Caven, told me that he wanted to compete at the collegiate level after high school.

My first reaction was that if Todd was good enough, he surely would be noticed by a college coach and offered a scholarship. But what if he wasn't? What if he was somehow overlooked? We decided that we just could not afford to take that chance.

We began researching the recruiting process and were frustrated by the lack of available information. We discovered there was no “recruiting hotline” into which college coaches could tap to discover qualified high-school student-athletes and that many college programs, in fact, seemed to find their recruits haphazardly — through an associate of the program or a chance encounter. This became even more apparent at smaller schools that did not have the recruiting budget to scour the countryside for available talent.

After speaking with many coaches, guidance counselors, and former and current college athletes and their parents, we concluded that it is up to the student-athlete to actively market himself or herself to colleges in which he or she has an interest — to pursue an athletics scholarship by attracting the attention of college coaches.

Anne Goodman James, women's swim coach and assistant athletics director at Northern Michigan University, concurs: “The most effective way for an athlete to draw attention is to write or call the institution and express interest. Once a contact has been made, all the appropriate materials will be

Walk-on limitation has no good purpose

I recently read Anne Goodman James' article (“Many men's sports unfairly imperiled”) in the October 3, 1994, issue of The NCAA News, and I must simply say “hoo-ray.”

Can we take time to look at the Title IX revolution with the same compassion that James did? Is it not time to realize what we have done to sports in America? Let us take stock of “where we are” and think about where we are going in education and in sports.

When I was in school, women had no NCAA opportunities, and that was wrong. We are correcting the problem but are going too far.

James says of Title IX “there is no intention to eliminate opportunities for men in sports” and “the purpose of Title IX was to increase, not limit, opportunities for student-athletes.” I strongly agree. The establishment of a limit on the number of walk-ons in track and field serves no purpose. The majority of walk-ons do not travel, do not get university-issued equipment and receive very few tangible benefits.

□ Letter

They do, however, wear the university uniforms while participating in some home meets, use locker-room facilities, have their picture taken as a member of the varsity team and receive other small benefits. Sometimes I wonder why they stay out for four to five years and do all the work with little chance of success.

University regulations, the current trend of NCAA legislation and the edicts of the United States court system seem to me to be totally out of whack to say that the universities of America must strike out men who enjoy the university team experience. I am sure that the mothers of America want opportunity for their sons as well as their daughters to compete.

The foregoing leads me to the main point of my letter. I feel that our universities, the NCAA and the U.S. courts should be aware of the fact that we do not live only in the present. We live in the past and the future. For “us” to make the decision that we do not want a full track team, as we have had in our glorious past, and to deny future alumni the varsity team experience is not a wise decision. Not only do we eliminate future content alumni, but we violate the first law of education, which is that of the law of opportunity.

I humbly, but with strong conviction, ask all of us to review our position taken in regard to squad limitation for team sports. If we would issue a stay on this philosophical and codified stance until further study can be made, it would be appreciated.

Lastly and strangely, how most of these restrictions on walk-ons got into place is mystifying. I have not talked to a man, woman or child in America, nor any coach, administrator or athlete, who believes it is right. Let us restore the American dream of opportunity to the universities of our land.

Play with emotion, but lose with class

John Calipari, men's basketball coach
University of Massachusetts, Amherst
St. Louis Post-Dispatch

“I think it's as important that we teach our players how to lose with class as it is to win.

“In a loss, my players know you never take away from another team's win. Ever. You always give the other team credit for beating you. You never put out excuses that ‘well, we just didn't play well....’”

“I want my guys to be emotional. I want them to grab and shake each other. That's the fun part of the game, the emotion.

“Do I get emotional with my guys? Sure I do. I want them to play with emotion. I want them to have fun. I want them to scream and yell when they dunk the ball. But not toward another player. Not to say ‘in your face.’ I think that's wrong. I think that's not good sportsmanship....

“Fighting, taunting and all that stuff needs to go. [But] if we try to legislate emotion, we're making a major, major mistake.”

Military academy football

George Chaump, head football coach
U.S. Naval Academy
The Washington Post

“It's not easy. It's taken longer than I would like.... I see the money other schools spend, everyone has $30 million from civilian alumni, but we're not civilian. We still have to go by the dictates of the U.S. government. Unfortunately, all some people look at is the score and say, ‘What's the matter?’ But I know we're doing it the right way, and I know we still have the support of the people who count, so I don't get that depressed.”

Adm. Charles R. Larson, superintendent
U.S. Naval Academy
The Washington Post

“Having a winning football program is something which all of us here at the Naval Academy would like to see. However, it is important to stress that our primary mission is not to produce professional athletes. Our mission is to produce future Navy and Marine Corps officers with character...men and women who are prepared to lead and show the highest standards of honesty, integrity and professional performance.”

Compensation

Derrick Brooks, football player
Florida State University
College Sports magazine

“I feel there's enough money made by the NCAA. You see people running around in nice suits at parties at the big bowl games; that's the money we make for them. I think the NCAA makes enough money that every student-athlete should be (financially) compensated in some way, (but) only if they graduate. Maybe give them $5,000 after they graduate to get themselves settled until they find a job. Or maybe the student-athlete could put that money toward furthering their education. I think that would up the graduation rates 100 percent.”

Officiating

Al Borges, offensive coordinator
Boise State University
Referee magazine

“The reason you yell at an official is to work on the next call. He's not going to change the one he just made because he'd look like a fool. So you start working with the psychology. As much as officials won't admit it, they can sense the feeling when one team is gaining an advantage because of a call that's been made. It's a subconscious thing. I see it all the time, especially in basketball. The action's so fast, and the whistle's blowing endlessly. They start to think: ‘Hey, the next call is going the other way.’ It's just too much of a coincidence to be a coincidence. There's a controversial call and everybody's out of their seats. Then all of a sudden, no more than 25 or 30 seconds later, there's a call favoring the other team.”

Gary Blackney, head football coach
Bowling Green State University
Referee magazine

“Maybe when you're an established football coach, you can say almost anything that you want to an official. I'm a (newer) head coach. My approach is, ‘Yes, sir,’ ‘No, sir,’ ‘Good call!’”

Sports for fun

Jan Glidewell, writer
St. Petersburg Times

“Want to have some real fun?”

“Take your family (that is the group of vaguely familiar people whose faces you are used to seeing illuminated by the blue glow from your idiot box) out into the fine warm Florida air this weekend and seek out a high-school or youth sports venue where games are still actually played for sport.

“You'll have to be selective. There are still parents who will belittle their children for dropping a thrown ball and there are still incidents like the one in Plant City the other night where a player allegedly broke a coach's nose and assaulted two sheriff's deputies in an argument over playing time.

“But out there removed from the temptations of big bucks, there are still many people who see sport as something other than a superhighway into your wallet and teams whose enthusiasm and dedication to clean fun will so amaze you that you won't even notice you don't need five or six beers to get through an afternoon's viewing.”

II cross country, track consider age limits

By Stephen R. Hagwell
THE NCAA NEWS STAFF

Division II cross country and track and field soon may take on a younger look.

At least if some Division II coaches get their way.

Frustrated in recent years by an "influx of older competitors" — specifically older foreign athletes — a number of Division II coaches are advocating the adoption of NCAA legislation that would greatly reduce access to competition for older athletes.

"The influx of more experienced athletes coming into Division II seems to be a greater problem every year," said David Noble, men's cross country and track coach at Angelo State University. "It's not just two or three (overage foreign) athletes on a team, it's a whole mass. We've got to take some steps."

To stem the influx, eight Division II institutions are sponsoring an amendment to NCAA Bylaw 14.2.4 — Proposal No. 2-56 in this year's Second Publication of Proposed Legislation — that would apply the 20-year age rule currently applicable in Division I to the sports of Division II cross country, indoor track and outdoor track and field. If adopted, Proposal No. 2-56 would be effective August 1, 1995.

Division I has had such a rule for all sports since 1980.

The 20-year age rule states that any participation as an individual or team representative in organized sports competition by a student during each 12-month period after the student's 20th birthday and before initial full-time enrollment in a collegiate institution shall count as one year of varsity competition in that sport. Further, the student shall not be charged with more than one season of competition in that sport in any 12-month period after the student's 20th birthday.

Competition is defined by several criteria, such as whether an event is scheduled and publicized in advance, whether official score is kept, and whether official timers or game officials are used, among others.

Incidentally, the NCAA Legislative Review Committee — as part of its eligibility deregulation package for the 1995 NCAA Convention — has proposed increasing the Division I age threshold from age 20 to 21.

Not a new issue

"This isn't a new issue...the rumblings have been there," said Jim Sackett, men's and women's cross country and track coach at California State Polytechnic University, Pomona, and a member of the NCAA Men's and Women's Track and Field Committee. "(The issue) has been there, it just hasn't come to the front before because of other issues. Now, it's very apparent that this is getting worse."

The issue has become such a concern that a vote on age-limit restrictions at the Division II Track Coaches Association last summer resulted in 66 of 70 coaches voting in favor.

Advocates claim the lack of an age rule in Division II has resulted in a competitive inequity. They contend that older foreign athletes have extensive opportunities for competition not available to the typical collegiate student-athlete and that the exposure and the additional years for physical development give them a significant competitive advantage over younger, domestic athletes.

"We just don't think it's fair to have 29- and 30-year-old athletes compete against 18- to 21-year-old athletes," Sackett said. "Overage athletes have started to dominate distance running in Division II. Physically, there's no question that the more mature, more experienced athlete is, the better runner they'll be."

Support not universal

Not everyone favors the proposal. Opponents argue that it would further limit Division II schools from recruiting quality student-athletes. They also contend the proposal simply is aimed at successful programs.

"This whole issue is blown out of proportion," said George Williams, men's and women's cross country and track coach at St. Augustine's College and a member of the Men's and Women's Track and Field Committee. "Whether I have foreigners won't make or break my team. I don't think it's a big problem...it's basically a Division I issue."

Wes Kitley, men's and women's track coach at Abilene Christian University, agrees.

"I don't want to restrict our programs to the point where we're more like Division I. We are Division II," he said. "If we take the age rule away, the only difference or advantage we have from Division I is that we can recruit junior college kids who haven't graduated. I don't want to be limited. I'm not prejudiced either way. I just don't want more restrictions. That's my biggest complaint."

Advocates contend that adopting the overage rule would require schools to shift their recruiting focus from older, more experienced athletes to high-school student-athletes.

"I don't think anyone is saying they are antiforeign," Sackett said. "We just want everyone to be put on the same playing field. Everyone likes to win, but when the field is against you, when you've got young kids competing against older, more experienced athletes, they get discouraged."

Kitley agrees that older, more experienced athletes have an advantage; however, he argues that the numbers of overage student-athletes competing in Division II are so minimal that they don't justify restrictions.

Survey information

A survey conducted at the 1994 Division II Men's and Women's Outdoor Track and Field Championships by Galen Piper, women's cross country and track coach at Shippensburg University of Pennsylvania, indicated that 16 percent of both men's and women's competitors at the championships were foreign.

The percentage of scoring places occupied at the championships by foreign student-athletes was 25.2 percent for men and 18.6 percent for women.

While the survey did not reveal

If a number of coaches have their way, the Division II cross country and track and field championships will take on a more youthful appearance. The championships fields for those sports are becoming more dominated by older foreign competitors, contend some coaches who favor NCAA legislation that would impose an age restriction on participants.

the number of overage foreign student-athletes — many survey respondents did not indicate age — it is known that at least seven individual-event titles were claimed by overage foreign student-athletes.

"The bottom line is that U.S. kids are not getting the opportunity to go on," said Kim Duyst, women's cross country and track coach at California State University, Stanislaus, and president of the Division II Track Coaches Association. "U.S. kids are getting fewer opportunities to compete on the collegiate level."

Kitley says he's all for helping cross country and track, but he believes that not only older foreign student-athletes would be shut out; so would older domestic student-athletes.

"I look at Division II as an alternative to Division I," he said. "One of the things that makes us different is that we provide opportunities for older athletes. If we adopt this proposal, we'll take that away. I don't think that's right. I don't think that's what Division II is about."

Noble contends the proposal will help by forcing coaches to return to teaching younger athletes, and force schools to once again recruit in-state student-athletes.

"Under no circumstances am I saying a team doesn't have a right to recruit all foreigners," said Noble, the primary contact for the proposal. "If this (proposal) passes, we still always will have foreign kids. There's no question about that, and I welcome that."

"The worst thing that comes out of this in my mind is that I'm antiforeign, and that's not the case. I'm antiexperience. The (ability) gap is too great...we just don't think it's fair to the young athletes."

College recruiting

sent. This will start the recruiting process."

Joe Conroy, women's volleyball coach at Youngstown State University, advises student-athletes to "promote yourself. Don't wait for coaches to call."

Armed with this knowledge, we put together a game plan to market Todd and his talents to various colleges and their athletics programs. He contacted each coach by sending some information about himself and where the coach could see him compete. He also provided the names and phone numbers of people the coaches could talk to regarding his abilities. He included not only athletics data but also his academic statistics and accomplishments, as well.

While I say Todd did all this, the truth is that it was a team effort. We realized that Todd's time was limited due to school, sports and homework, so I did much of the research and legwork. He involved his high-school and club coaches and his guidance counselor, who encouraged his efforts and provided information about college programs, made phone calls and wrote letters of recommendation on his behalf. A coach from an opposing team and a local college coach also became part of his team.

I can't imagine a young student-athlete having to do all that we did by himself or herself, and the teamwork approach does save time and provides valuable support. But I firmly believe that support is all the team, and especially parents, should provide. The student-athlete must assume a leadership role and become the team captain. He or she has to have a strong enough desire to go to college and play collegiate athletics to take the initiative. There are things only the student can and should do, such as make that initial contact with college coaches, write their own letters and make their own phone calls.

We found that most college coaches do not like to be contacted by parents. According to Rosie Kramarski, men's and women's tennis coach at Eastern Illinois University, "When a parent calls, that leads me to believe that the parent wants to see their son or daughter compete. But I need to know that it's the student-athlete who wants to compete for four years at the collegiate level."

Todd sent out letters to 30 college coaches asking about their academic, as well as athletics, programs. Soon our mailbox overflowed with replies from coaches, along with information about their colleges.

While Todd spent hours excitedly poring through college catalogs and talking with coaches, we spoke to other talented student-athletes in the area who never were contacted by a single college coach! And that's too bad. These young people would have enhanced a collegiate sports program had they not been overlooked.

Sitting back and waiting to get noticed by a college coach is like playing the lottery. If you win, you win big — but chances are your number will never get picked.

Todd went to Stanford University on a soccer scholarship. He received a $100,000 education for a fraction of the cost. Would it have happened if he had waited to be noticed? We'll never know, but like the lottery, I wouldn't bet on it.

Todd Caven and Penny Hastings have written a book for student-athletes and their parents based on their experiences, research, interviews and a survey of more than 500 college coaches nationwide. "How to Win a Sports Scholarship" will be published in March 1995 by First Base Sports, Inc., of Manhattan Beach, California. For more information, call 310/318-5205.

■ Championships previews

Division II Women's Soccer

Early loss threatens Barry's return to tournament

Event: 1994 Division II Women's Soccer Championship.

Overview: Three-time champion Barry became the first school to win back-to-back championships last year, but the Buccaneers will have to fight to gain a berth this year despite posting a 15-2 record through mid-October. Barry dropped a 1-0 decision at Presbyterian in the third game of the season, and the regional berth could go to either of those two schools. Barry has reeled off eight consecutive wins after a setback against Mercyhurst. Presbyterian is 11-1 with the lone loss coming to Central region power Quincy. Presbyterian's win over Barry came on a direct free kick from Christi Flack with less than a minute to play in overtime. It is Flack's lone goal of the season so far....Mercyhurst could advance from the Northeast region. The Lakers are 8-1 overall with wins over Barry, Bloomsburg and Northern Colorado, and are paced by freshman goalkeeper Stacy Bortz (five shutouts). Franklin Pierce also should challenge for a berth behind the scoring of Nathalie Geeris and Susanne Bergstrom, who have combined for 39 goals and 26 assists for the 14-0 Ravens....Other contenders include Quincy, Sonoma State and Metropolitan State.

Field: Six teams from six regions will be selected October 31. Teams representing the New England and Northeast regions will receive first-round byes.

Dates and sites: All games will be played on the campuses of competing institutions. First-round games will be November 5 or 6. The semifinals will be November 11 and the championship game will be November 13.

Results: Championship results will appear in the November 14 issue of The NCAA News.

Championship notes: Franklin Pierce allowed a goal in a 5-1 opening-day win over Quinnipiac, but hasn't been scored upon since. In 13 wins, the Ravens have outscored their opponents, 88-0. The Ravens have scored in double figures on four occasions. Top scorer Geeris has scored two or more goals in seven games....Barry is the only team to have participated in all six championships. The Buccaneers have shut out their last eight opponents.

Division III Men's Soccer

Unbeaten squads hope to advance

Event: 1994 Division III Men's Soccer Championship.

Overview: Ohio Wesleyan and Virginia Wesleyan both were unbeaten through mid-October and still on track to avenge second-round losses in last year's tournament. Top-ranked Ohio Wesleyan, 15-0, must get past regional nemesis Kenyon — which knocked the Bishops out of the 1993 tournament — in order to keep its record perfect. The Bishops' top guns are forwards Obi Moneme (16 goals, six assists) and Wayne Street (eight goals, 15 assists). Bishops head coach Jay Martin recorded his 300th win earlier this year against Allegheny....Virginia Wesleyan, which tied Mary Washington earlier, figures to remain unbeaten entering postseason play. The Blue Marlins in 15 games have outscored their opponents, 73-6, and are paced by the junior tandem of Evan Whitson and Jim Hickling, who have combined for 34 goals and 16 assists. Mike Duffy, the lone senior on the squad, has chipped in 14 goals and 10 assists....Trenton State should challenge behind goalkeeper Rob Jordan, who has returned from a season-ending hand injury last year to post eight shutouts in 15 games for the 13-1-1 Lions....Williams, 9-0, which has yet to trail in a match this year, also will contend behind the scoring of John Thompson, who scored nine goals in one six-game stretch.

Field: Thirty-two teams from eight regions will be selected October 30.

Dates and sites: All games will be played at on-campus sites. First- and second-round games will be played November 4-5 or November 5-6. Third-round games will be completed by November 13. The semifinals and final will be November 18-19 or November 19-20.

Results: Championship results will appear in the November 21 issue of The NCAA News.

Championship notes: Ohio Wesleyan should extend its streak of 16 consecutive postseason appearances. Although the Bishops have yet to win the title, they finished second in 1990 and 1992 and have won more tournament games (27) than any other school....Williams advanced all the way to last year's final match in its first postseason appearance after a New England Small College Athletic Conference ban on postseason play was lifted....Kenyon and Ohio Wesleyan have met in regional championship matches in three of the last four tournaments, with the Bishops winning in 1990 and 1992. Kenyon's victory last year enabled the Lords to advance to their first semifinal in four tournament appearances.

Steve Ginsberg helped Williams advance to last year's final. The team currently is 9-0, thanks in part to John Thompson, who scored nine goals in a six game stretch this season.

Division III Women's Soccer

Trenton State proves tough at home

Event: 1994 Division III Women's Soccer Championship.

Overview: Contenders for this year's title probably will not want to play at Trenton State during the tournament. The defending champion Lions, only in their fifth year of varsity play, are 32-0-2 at Lions Stadium since the program's inception and have allowed just two goals during that span. Trenton State sports a 16-0 record this season and is unbeaten in 31 consecutive games dating to last September. Junior goalkeeper Danielle Mastrosimone has posted 12 shutouts this year, giving her 36 for her career — six shy of a school record. Lion scoring has been plentiful, led by Jennifer Mazzucco with 11 goals and two assists, and Kim Faust and Tracy Pear with eight goals apiece....The Lions should be challenged by UC San Diego, ranked second behind Trenton State much of the season. The Tritons have played 33 consecutive regular-season games without a loss dating to the 1992 season, when they dropped a match to Cal Lutheran. That loss is the only regular-season setback the Tritons have suffered to a Division III school in program history....Other contenders for this year's title include Plymouth State, Mary Washington and Skidmore.

Field: Twenty teams from seven regions will be selected October 30.

Dates and sites: All games will be played on the campuses of competing institutions. First-round games will be November 2. Regionals will be November 5-6. The semifinals will be November 12 and the championship game will be November 13.

Results: Championship results will appear in the November 14 issue of The NCAA News.

Championship notes: UC San Diego coach Brian McManus has a 119-15-15 record in eight seasons at the Triton helm. He has guided the Tritons to six semifinal appearances and one Division III title during that span....Williams' leading goal scorer is Mindy Thompson, whose brother John tops Williams' men's team in goals scored....It took 10 games for Trenton State to allow a goal this season. Rowan scored the goal, but lost the game to the unbeaten Lions.

When it comes to playing at home, Lisa Cesaro (left) and Trenton State are heads above the competition. The Lions are 32-0-2 at Lions Stadium and have allowed just two goals during that time.

Division II Field Hockey

League foes anticipate meeting in final

Event: 1994 Division II Field Hockey Championship.

Overview: With two Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference (PSAC) teams [Bloomsburg (13-1-2) and Lock Haven (14-1)] playing for the national title every year, this could be renamed the PSAC championship, except that the team that wins the conference title doesn't always win the national championship. This year, the actual PSAC tournament, by vote of conference presidents, shrinks from four teams to two. Had that been the format last year, Bloomsburg, which eventually won the national championship by edging Lock Haven in penalty strokes, wouldn't even have been in the conference tournament. As it was, Bloomsburg defeated Lock Haven three times in 1993 — regular season, PSAC and national championship. Bloomsburg coach Jan Hutchinson said, "It's hard to keep playing each other over and over. It's almost like you don't want to win one so you can win the next. You want to be the underdog in the national championship, but you still need to win enough to get there." Bloomsburg plays in the North region and may have a relatively easier path to the Division II game this year since Lock Haven, a South region team, will have to fend off a strong challenge from Millersville (12-3).

Field: A team from the North region will be selected to play a team from the South.

Date and site: November 6 on the campus of one of the competing institutions.

Results: Championships results will appear in the November 7 issue of The NCAA News.

Championship notes: Lock Haven won this year's first meeting with Bloomsburg, 2-1, in overtime. The Lady Eagles' Colette Gasparini tied the school's nine-year-old career goals record (74) in that game, then broke the record against Longwood. The original mark was set in four years, but Gasparini, a junior college transfer, surpassed it in less than three seasons.

Division III Field Hockey

Finalists ready to square off again

Event: 1994 Division III Field Hockey Championship.

Overview: Mary Washington (11-2-1), runner-up last year, makes a strong case for a return trip, with 17 veterans back. A relative newcomer to the tournament, the Eagles were invited for the first time three years ago, when they lost to eventual champion Trenton State in the first round. Conference rival Eastern Mennonite's only loss came against the Eagles....Middlebury (8-0-1), Plymouth State (8-3) and other teams from the New England Small College Athletic Association formerly were ineligible for the championship because of an NESCAC rule, but the league ban ended last year and conference member Trinity (Connecticut) made it to the semifinals. Middlebury stayed home then, but is undefeated this year through nine games. Might the potential first-timers be intimidated by tournament pressure? Not likely. Many players also were on the school's 1994 lacrosse team that advanced to the Division III semifinals in their first appearance. Missy Foote, Middlebury coach, said, "Our players are poised and confident. I thought we might be over-matched (in lacrosse) last year, but that wasn't the case."....Defending champion Cortland State is flying high again at 15-0 (22 consecutive wins dating to last year), including victories over 1992 champion and tournament mainstay William Smith (15-2) and 1993 Division II runner-up Lock Haven. The Red Dragons have shut out all but three opponents and have surrendered just three goals....Trenton State (12-0), champion in 1991 and 1992, has outshot its opponents, 348-52.

Field: Sixteen teams will be selected from five regions.

Dates and sites: Regional play will be November 5-6 on the campus of one of the competing institutions. The semifinals and championship will be November 11-12 on the campus of one of the competing institutions.

Results: Championships results will appear in the November 14 issue of The NCAA News.

Championship notes: Last year's Cortland State-Mary Washington title game marked the first time since 1984 (Bloomsburg vs. Messiah) that two first-time finalists met for the title.

■ Administrative Committee minutes

Minority interests committee keeps eye on eligibility issue

The NCAA Minority Opportunities and Interests Committee is one of several groups in the Association that intently has been tracking development of proposed Division I initial-eligibility legislation for the 1995 Convention.

At its September 27-28 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri, the committee voiced its position on six proposals involving Division I initial-eligibility standards that were published in the Second Publication of Proposed Legislation.

The committee, however, did not have adequate time to discuss a new proposal that will be sponsored by the Presidents Commission, which met on the same dates as the minority committee.

Charles Whitcomb, chair of recreation/leisure studies and faculty athletics representative at San Jose State University and chair of the Minority Opportunities and Interests Committee, said the committee will not adopt a position on the Presidents Commission proposal until after holding a telephone conference call to discuss it in more detail.

The Commission has proposed delaying the effective date for the sliding eligibility scale of 1992 Convention Proposal No. 16 until August 1996 and also has recommended a less restrictive policy for partial qualifiers than it proposed in June.

Under the presidents' proposal, partial qualifiers would be those prospective student-athletes who do not meet the requirements to be considered a qualifier but who achieve a 2.500 grade-point average (4.000 scale) in 13 core courses and a standardized-test score as required by the institution.

Partial qualifiers also would not be able to gain a fourth year of eligibility under the Commission's most recent proposal. However, proposals scheduled for consideration at the Convention are structured in such a way that the membership would be able to choose between three or four years of eligibility.

"Right now, I don't know where the committee stands," Whitcomb said. "There is still a lot of concern on taking away that fourth year of eligibility."

Whitcomb said the minority committee supported Proposal No. 174, a resolution adopted at the 1994 Convention that directed a study of initial-eligibility standards. Whitcomb said he believes the results of that study have been viewed differently by a number of groups — differences that he believes are reflected in the Presidents Commission's proposal.

The NCAA Council has voted to support the Presidents Commission's modified proposal. It also has withdrawn its support for Proposal No. 2-51 in the Second Publication of Proposed Legislation, which was recommended by the NCAA Special Committee to Review Initial-Eligibility Standards.

"That implies what will happen (at the Convention)," Whitcomb said, referring to the Council's support of the Presidents Commission

Other highlights

In other actions at its September 27-28 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri, the NCAA Minority Opportunities and Interests Committee:

■ Met with Daniel Boggan Jr., former vice-chancellor of business and administrative services at the University of California, Berkeley, who began duties as NCAA group executive director for education services October 17. The committee's discussion with Boggan focused on the future relationship between the committee and the NCAA's educational services group.

■ Reviewed the diversity workshops that the committee organized during the past year, particularly a workshop at Winthrop University August 18-20. The committee voted to conduct the following workshops during the next 12 to 18 months: a pilot workshop at a historically black institution (intended to further bring a perspective to the workshops that was not widely articulated in the previous sessions), a full-scale workshop for members of the Council and Presidents Commission, and other workshops at regional and national sites.

■ Discussed the Association's procedures for securing vendors for NCAA championships and national office operations as they pertain to minority businesses. The committee requested that the NCAA staff develop information regarding the amount of money the Association spends in business dealings with minority companies, the number of minority vendors working with the Association, application procedures used to secure vendors, and the practices in place to ensure that minority vendors receive an opportunity to work with the Association.

■ Reviewed its demographic study, which was forwarded to the NCAA Council earlier this year, and voted to stress to the Council the importance of beginning to address problem areas identified in the study.

■ Formed three new subcommittees to explore the following areas: student-athlete welfare, access and equity; current and new enhancement programs for women and minorities; and problems facing historically black institutions.

■ Discussed the committee's charge, resulting from the adoption of 1994 Convention Proposal No. 174, to develop a report on the effects that grants-in-aid reductions would have on minorities. The committee announced that it will have a report completed by December.

■ Held a joint meeting with the NCAA Committee on Women's Athletics September 29 to discuss issues of concern to both groups and ways the two committees can enhance their working relationship. The two committees agreed to hold at least one joint meeting annually in the future.

plan. "That is a compromise. It implies to address some of the concerns for access. There is a database that was reviewed by the (minority committee) and the Resolution 174 (special initial-eligibility standards) committee, which supported the earlier recommendation of the Council (Proposal No. 2-51)."

At the meeting that was concurrent with the Presidents Commission meeting, the committee took no position on Proposal No. 2-47, which would institute a freshman-ineligibility policy, and it voted to oppose Proposal Nos. 2-48, 2-49 and 2-50. The committee also voted to support Proposal No. 2-52 if Proposal No. 2-51 is not adopted. Proposal 2-52 is a measure put forth by the members of the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference that essentially would maintain Proposition 48 standards until more data on the impact of initial-eligibility standards can be collected.

■ Certification policies and procedures revisions

Diving discussion among primary topics for swimming committee

Discussions involving diving, administration of Division I and Division III championships, and a proposal to make the Division II men's and women's championships a combined-scoring event dominated the NCAA Men's and Women's Swimming Committee's meeting October 11-13 in Kansas City, Missouri.

The committee considered several diving proposals, including a new system of selecting divers from zone meets to participate in the Division I championships that the committee will recommend to the NCAA Executive Committee.

The new diving selection system is a placement-priority qualifying system from zone meets based on individual events rather than a combined score for two. The system will be forwarded to the Executive Committee for the 1996 championships and if approved would be used to determine zone allocations for 1996.

The system is intended to eliminate "combination-scoring" qualifying and should help place the best divers in each event into the NCAA championships. A new tiebreaker system also was adopted to clarify selection of the last zone allocation position.

In another action, notification procedures for the Divisions I and III championships were refined, as were penalties for relay-only swimmers who fail to swim in at least one relay for which he or she qualified for the championships. Those swimmers will be disqualified from any optional events participated in, and the institution will be disqualified from the last relay in which the swimmer could have swum in order to meet optional-entry participation requirements. In addition, no per diem or transportation will be paid.

Division I swimming

In addition to recommending the new diving selection system for zone meets, the Division I subcommittee of the NCAA Men's and Women's Swimming Committee agreed to change the schedule of diving events at the 1995 championships as follows:

■ Days 1 and 2—Springboard

1-4 p.m. Rounds 1 and 2 preliminaries (voluntary and optional dives)

4:20 p.m.* Round 1 finals (voluntary dives)

7 p.m. Round 2 finals (optionals—in order with swimming events)

*Round 1 finals to start 20 minutes after completion of diving preliminaries.

■ Day 3—Platform

1-4 p.m. Rounds 1 and 2 preliminaries (voluntary and optional dives)

7 p.m. Platform finals (in order with swimming events)

The subcommittee also discussed a proposal to add a third day of competition (Sunday) to the zone meets, but decided not to recommend the proposal because the Executive Committee was told when the platform competition was added three years ago that the length of the zone meets would not increase. The subcommittee also recognized potential problems with Sunday competition, including a noon starting time and the likelihood of having to adjust dates of competition due to certain teams not being allowed to compete on Sunday.

In other actions:

■ Recommendations were made regarding future sites for the men's and women's championships: University of Texas at Austin for the 1996 men's championships; University of Michigan for the 1996 women's championships; University of Minnesota, Twin Cities, for the 1997 men's championships; and the Indiana University Natatorium in Indianapolis for the 1997 women's championships.

■ The subcommittee recommended changing the end of the qualifying periods for the 1997 championships to 18 days before the start of the championships. Entry forms then would be due 14 days before the start of the championships.

Division II swimming

The Division II subcommittee of the NCAA Men's and Women's Swimming Committee discussed the ramifications of proposed legislation that would make the 1997 Division II men's and women's championships a combined-scoring event.

The proposal was made initially due to falling sponsorship numbers in men's swimming programs and was supported by the Division II membership. However, the Division II Championships Committee did not endorse the proposal because of concern about the impact of a combined-scoring championship on the women's competition.

The subcommittee met with Anne Goodman James, president of the College Swimming Coaches Association of America and the primary contact for the proposed legislation, and discussed various options regarding the future of the proposal.

The subcommittee also discussed future sites and considered implementing a rotation including Grand Forks, North Dakota; San Antonio; and Canton, Ohio. The 1995 men's and women's championships will be held in Canton, but the subcommittee has not recommended a site for 1996.

Division III swimming

The Division III subcommittee of the NCAA Men's and Women's Swimming Committee announced this year's qualifying periods during its meeting.

The qualifying periods will be from September 1, 1994, through February 19, 1995, for women and September 1, 1994, through February 26, 1995, for men.

In other actions:

■ The subcommittee recommended that Emory University serve as host for the 1996 men's and women's championships.

■ Regarding notification procedures for the Division III championships, the subcommittee determined that coaches now must notify the Division III computer-entry specialist for the appropriate championship by noon (Central time) the Monday after the official psyche sheet is published if a student-athlete who has been invited to the championships becomes unavailable.

Failure to comply with the notification procedures could result in a substantial penalty to an institution and may include the disqualification of a competitor.

■ A proposal was made to add a permanent diving representative to the subcommittee. Currently, the swimming committee structure allows for two members to represent diving interests — one representing Division I and the other representing Divisions II and III.

The Division III subcommittee will forward a proposal to the NCAA Executive Committee to expand the committee and permit Divisions II and III each to have a permanent diving representative. If endorsed, the proposal then would be forwarded to the NCAA Council for consideration as proposed legislation.

Swimming rules

In addition to making minor editorial changes to the Men's and Women's Swimming and Diving Rules book, the rules subcommittee of the Men's and Women's Swimming Committee adopted several rules changes during its meeting.

Those changes, which were ratified by the full committee, will become effective for the 1995-96 season, unless otherwise indicated. The subcommittee:

■ Stipulated that when there are two or more heats in the 800-yard freestyle relay in championships competition, the fastest two heats shall be contested in the finals session and the remaining heats shall be contested during the preliminaries session. The event still will be contested as a time final event. This change will be effective for the 1995 Divisions II and III championships and the 1996 Division I championships.

■ Declared that a swimmer who swims in any lane and/or heat other than the one assigned will be disqualified from that event only. The revised language will be moved from Rule 3-4-1 and placed under Rule 3-1-4b.

■ Made provisions for a diver to withdraw from a preliminary diving event in championships competition by electing to take a declared scratch. The coach of a diver who elects to take a declared scratch shall notify the referee before the start of the preliminary diving event. A declared scratch in a given event shall count as participation in that event.

■ Adopted a proposal to allow divers to dive in the finals of NCAA championships in reverse order of zone-meet qualification.

Committee members

Both Cooney and Klingseisen are members of the NCAA Student-Athlete Advisory Committee and were recommended for the FISU forum by Richard Kacmarynski, student-athlete chair of the committee, and Janet M. Justus, NCAA director of education resources and staff liaison to the committee.

"Both Laura and Brendan are significant contributors to the committee," Justus said. "They're enthusiastic, bright and interested in the international athletics world."

And now they're both seasoned world travelers.

"It was something you couldn't really prepare for," said Cooney, who has traveled to Greece and Ireland in the past. "The meals are big affairs. We had sit-down meals three times a day."

"And the meals took like three hours," joked Klingseisen, whose international traveling experience before making the trip to Sicily consisted of traveling to Canada. "(And) I had really had jet lag when I got there. It was a lot different than I thought it would be."

But the experience was well worth any differences in culture, Klingseisen said.

"I would definitely recommend to anyone who could go to the forum to do it," she said. "It's important as the world becomes more international that we become familiar with what's going on around us."

"It was just a really good learning experience."

Title IX seminars scheduled

Two seminars focusing on Title IX issues have been scheduled for April 1995.

The first Title IX seminar will be April 10-11 in Dallas, and the second is scheduled April 20-21 in Baltimore. The seminars will be conducted by the NCAA education resources staff.

The seminars are designed for athletics directors, athletics department administrators and others who are "responsible for ensuring that the institution is in compliance with the law," said Janet M. Justus, NCAA director of education resources.

"It's a practical, education-based forum that hopefully will teach people the basics of Title IX law, and also give them the chance to see how other schools are responding positively to that law," Justus said.

The seminars will include as presenters attorneys familiar with Title IX law as well as representatives from member institutions that have implemented changes to bring athletics departments into compliance with the law.

Registration forms for the seminars are expected to be sent to member institutions in January. More information can be obtained from Justus at the national office.

■ Division III senior woman administrators*

(Name of SWA, school and SWA's title)

As a result of a survey to review the roles of senior woman administrators and at the direction of the NCAA Gender-Equity Task Force, the NCAA Committee on Women's Athletics has developed a list of institutions that have a senior woman administrator (along with the SWA's name and position within the athletics department).

Following is the list of Division III institutions that have an SWA. The list for Division I was published in the October 10 issue of The NCAA News; the list for Division II appeared in the October 17 issue of the News.

The Committee on Women's Athletics also developed a list of schools that do not have an SWA (that list was published in the October 10 issue of the News).

That list did not include those schools with female athletics directors that designated a senior man in administration on the Designation of Institutional Representatives form. It should be noted, however, that the list included all-male and all-female schools that, by nature, would not designate an SWA.

be little opportunity for males to compete in athletics other than football and basketball."

Kerr contends that many lawmakers are unaware what is happening at institutions. He said he receives calls weekly from coaches who express concern about the future of their individual programs. Calls like those, Kerr said, have escalated in recent years to the point that he has concluded that the future of men's nonrevenue sports such as wrestling, gymnastics and swimming is in jeopardy.

No protection for men

"There apparently is no protection for men's sports," he said. "I really think the majority of the people in Congress do not understand the problem. We would like to get in front of a committee and state what is going on."

One member of Congress who is listening intently to the coaches associations is Rep. Dennis Hastert, R-Illinois. He is a former wrestling coach who says the measures that institutions are taking to achieve greater proportionality do little good for anyone, particularly women.

Hastert's office will be compiling the results of the survey that the coaches associations mailed to members of Congress. He said it is necessary to make lawmakers aware of these developments, or men's nonrevenue programs will continue to bear the brunt of gender-equity reductions.

"Unless you're involved, it's just another issue," Hastert said about his colleagues. "There are cross-pressures out there, too. My agenda simply is to sit down and talk with these folks and see what kind of response we get from OCR."

OCR's interpretation of Title IX largely has carried over into the courts, the coaches associations say, and they claim that men's sports that are being discontinued have been afforded no recourse under the law.

"Fundamentally, the statute is unimpeachable," said Dale Ander-

Wrestling coaches issue position paper

The following is the text of a position paper prepared by the National Wrestling Coaches Association.

Background

Title IX is a Federal civil rights statute enacted as part of the Education Amendments of 1972. The statute prohibits discrimination on the basis of sex in any education program or activity receiving Federal financial assistance.

Universities and colleges must comply with the rules and regulations issued by the Department of Education Office for Civil Rights (OCR). The primary rule they must comply with is the "proportionality rule." This rule states that athletic scholarships must be distributed in proportion to the gender ratio for athletics participants. Other aspects of athletics such as opportunities to compete, etc., must be equal or in proportion to the gender ratio proportion of the enrollment at the institution. OCR does not specify actions universities must take to remedy inequities if they are found to be in violation of these rules.

However, an increasingly popular option is to eliminate male athletics programs rather than to increase athletics opportunities for women. This means the university can satisfy the "proportionality rule," but it does nothing to help the underrepresented sex. Universities may meet the "letter of the law," but certainly fall short of the spirit.

In addition, the elimination of a male athletics program to meet Title IX proportionality requirements specifically punishes a distinct group of males for the inequities perpetrated by an institution or society. Punishment of these individuals is not the solution to this problem. Increasing opportunities for women is. While there is justification for affirmative action to remedy many discriminatory situations, affirmative action in these cases would still require the creation of special programs for women (or the underrepresented sex) rather than simply the elimination of male programs.

In recent court cases where men's programs have been dropped and athletes have attempted reinstatement through court action, reinstatement has been denied due to OCR rules. However, the courts did sympathize with the athletes and stated that "Congress, in enacting Title IX, probably never anticipated that it would yield such draconian results."

Solution

The most just and expedient solution to this situation is for Congress to indicate its intent that athletics programs not be eliminated in order to comply with Title IX rules. This would leave universities with several options for meeting the requirement. It would further indicate that the appropriate response to Title IX regulations is to increase opportunities and programs where inequities or discrimination exist.

son, an attorney who teaches at Michigan State University and who has worked closely with the wrestling coaches in organizing the letter-writing campaign in Congress. "Whoever gets to interpret that statute gets to determine how the rules are set."

Endangered sports

Perhaps no nonrevenue men's program is at a more critical point than men's gymnastics, which is in danger of losing its NCAA championships because of a deficient number of institutions sponsoring the sport.

"That's really not fair in the atmosphere of college athletics today," said Roy Johnson, men's gymnastics coach at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst and president of the National Association of Collegiate Gymnastics Coaches (Men).

Receiving a reprieve from OCR appears to be one in a short list of options available to men's gymnastics and other men's nonrevenue sports, he said.

"I would hope (OCR) would look at developing a protected status for endangered sports," he said. "The OCR has that ability. What has slowly happened is the elimination of men's Olympic sports. I think that is an unintended consequence of Title IX. This is not what we intended to do. If it continues, there will be very few Olympic men's sports programs in the country."

Anderson, who competed on a national-championship wrestling team at Michigan State in the 1960s, said his involvement in the coalition is motivated by the positive influence that athletics has had on his life. He said institutions simply are wrong to cut programs in the fashion they do today.

"I really think it is unethical to recruit a kid to your campus and then drop the sport," he said. "It's wrong. I think it's immoral."

Concern is mutual

Robert Bubb, executive director of the National Wrestling Coaches Association, said OCR's rulings and interpretations of Title IX do not offer much sympathy for men's programs that are being dropped. He said judgments of various lawsuits filed by male and female student-athletes have been one-sided.

"We don't think Title IX, being gender-neutral legislation, was meant to drop men's sports," Bubb said. "All we are asking for is that OCR reviews the legal ramifications."

"There is not one case where the women haven't won. There hasn't been one case where the men have won."

The men's nonrevenue coaches associations are emphatic that their concerns should not be construed as a backlash against women's programs. In fact, Bubb said, the coalition of nonrevenue coaches associations is equally concerned about institutions that are not adding new women's programs.

Anne Goodman James, women's swimming coach at Northern Michigan University and president of the College Swimming Coaches Association of America, said that women athletics administrators and coaches of women's sports are just as concerned that men's nonrevenue sports are being eliminated in the name of gender equity.

A stigma often accompanies discontinuation of a men's program; blame is directed at women in such cases, James said.

"That's the way the women feel now," she said. "The places where that is happening now, the women are being blamed."

While the coalition's primary thrust is to encourage institutions to seek options for achieving Title IX compliance other than simply cutting men's programs, James said the coalition's approach is not one-sided in favor of men's nonrevenue sports interests.

"We are working toward the same thing: protecting men's sports and protecting women's sports," James said. "We're not improving opportunities for women by dumping men."

"We've got to ask institutions to do some creative thinking. Take a look first. Don't just drop the sport."

1994 Column No. 38

NCAA Council actions

Below is a list of actions taken by the Council during its October 10-12, 1994, meeting.

1. The Council reviewed the provisions of NCAA Bylaw 11.7.1.1.1.1 (football recruiting coordinator exception — Divisions I-A and I-AA) and its April 20, 1994, interpretation regarding recruiting-coordination functions and determined that restricted-earnings coaches in Division I-AA football may make telephone calls to and prepare general correspondence for prospective student-athletes.

2. The Council utilized the provisions of NCAA Constitution 5.3.1.1.1 (noncontroversial amendment) to amend the provisions of Bylaw 11.3.4.6-(d) to permit an institution to provide expenses to a restricted-earnings coach's spouse and children to attend an institution's postseason competition without including the value of such expenses in the coach's compensation limitations.

3. During its August 12, 1994, telephone conference, the Special Committee to Oversee Implementation of the NCAA Initial-Eligibility Clearinghouse utilized the authority granted by the NCAA Administrative Committee to expedite the initial-eligibility certification process during its initial cycle to permit institutions to temporarily submit copies of official high-school transcripts (which include proof of graduation) directly to the clearinghouse for final certification purposes. During its October meeting, the Council reviewed this interpretation and determined that it is applicable on a permanent basis.

4. The Council approved a Division II Steering Committee recommendation (applicable to Division II only) that a two-year college jamboree (e.g., a preseason jamboree) involving two-year college basketball teams participating in outside competition would be considered a contest (and, thus, coaches could observe two-year prospects participating in the event), provided the event is organized by an institution (or the conference of which the institution is a member) or the appropriate state or national two-year college authority.

NCAA Bylaw 13.12.2.4 Local sports club

NCAA institutions should note that, in accordance with Bylaw 13.12.2.4, in sports other than Divisions I and II basketball, an institution's coach may be involved as a participant or in instructional or coaching activities in the same sport for a local sports club or organization located in the institution's home community, provided all prospects participating in such activities are legal residents of the area (within a 50-mile radius of the institution). Further, in club teams involving multiple teams or multiple sports, the 50-mile radius is applicable only to the team with which the institution's coach is involved; however, it is not permissible for the coach to assign a prospect who lives outside the 50-mile area to another coach of the club. A coach also may be involved in activities with individuals who are not of prospect age (i.e., prior to the ninth grade), regardless of where such individuals reside.

In addition, during its September 16, 1993, telephone conference, the NCAA Interpretations Committee determined that an institutional coaching staff member who is employed by a local sports club (e.g., racquet club, golf club, swim club) may provide individual instruction to prospects or serve as a coach for the club team that involves prospects, provided the club is an established, on-going club, and all prospects participating in such activities are legal residents of the area (within a 50-mile radius of the institution). The committee noted that if an institution's coach wishes to organize his or her own club that includes prospective student-athletes, such a club must be an established, ongoing club that is engaged in competitive activities and is not formed only to provide instruction to prospects.

Finally, during its February 13, 1992, telephone conference, the Interpretations Committee determined that if an institution's coaching staff member is involved with a local sports club during the academic year, the institution does not use one of its four evaluations for any prospect participating in any competition against the local team the individual coaches. The committee noted, however, that any other contests observed by the coaching staff member involving prospective student-athletes (e.g., scouting future opponents for the club team) must count as an evaluation for each prospect participating in the contest.

Committee Sportsmanship, ethics issues complex

to be confused with moral development. Simply following rules, in fact, may undermine the development of a strong moral sense.

■ Athletes often are models for other students. If they set an example, whether academically or with regard to sportsmanship, others may follow.

■ It is not reasonable to expect ethical development from student-athletes if they are not truly part of the student body. Athletically related aid may play a role in casting student-athletes as employees rather than students.

■ Sports media send conflicting and accusatory messages, often criticizing ethically sound programs for not being competitive while deriding other programs for being overly competitive.

■ Legislation is not necessarily a desirable way to address sportsmanship and ethical-conduct issues.

The committee also heard a presentation from R. Daniel Beebe, commissioner of the Ohio Valley Conference, who described the Ohio Valley's sportsmanship statement. The statement, which was adopted earlier this year by the conference's presidents, operates on the premise that athletics competition should not be conducted in a hostile or threatening environment and outlines steps that host teams should take to encourage hospitality. It also emphasizes the role coaches should play not only in instructing their teams about sportsmanship issues, but also in advising booster groups about what is expected of them.

Most dramatically, the statement allows no tolerance for players who taunt or bait other players. They are advised before every game that such behavior will be penalized without warning; officials are advised they will be fired if they do not enforce the rule. Finally, coaches are suspended for a game if their players leave the bench to fight.

Robert Kanaby, executive director of the National Federation of State High School Associations, said that sportsmanship values must be formed at the high-school level. He described the Federation's "Be a Sport" campaign and also described his beliefs that high-school athletes should mentor middle school athletes on sportsmanship issues; that life-skills programs on the high-school level would be helpful; and that the aid of the media should be enlisted.

The professional sports were represented by Gary Brokaw of the National Basketball Association, Brian Burke of the National Hockey League, Bill Murray of Major League Baseball and Gene Washington of the National Football League. They described initiatives taken by their leagues, especially with respect to fighting.

Other noncommittee members attending the meeting were Derek Bok, Kennedy School of Government, Harvard University; Roy F. Kramer, commissioner, Southeastern Conference; and Richard J. Ensor, commissioner, Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference and a member of the NCAA Council.

The committee's next meeting will be between Thanksgiving and Christmas, at which time it will identify tasks and make assignments for committee members.

Sportsmanship and ethical conduct in intercollegiate athletics is the 1996 NCAA Convention topic in the strategic plan of the Presidents Commission. The committee is chaired by William E. Shelton, president of Eastern Michigan University.

Reclassification granted to nine schools

Eight were effective September 1; one approved for 1995

Eight petitions for reclassification of all or part of member institutions' athletics programs have been approved effective September 1, 1994.

In addition, another petition was approved effective September 1, 1995, and one petition was denied. All of the petitions were considered by the NCAA staff and confirmed by the NCAA Council, under the provisions of NCAA Bylaws 20.4 and 20.5.

Probationary membership in all sports was assigned to five institutions, and 23 other schools received restricted-membership status in specific sports.

Thirteen institutions had their probationary or restricted membership status removed.

Reclassification

Two institutions were granted permission to move all or part of their programs to Division I or I-AA. California Polytechnic State University, San Luis Obispo, which already sponsored wrestling and women's volleyball in Division I, moved the remainder of its program from Division II to Division I-AA, and Hobart College moved its men's lacrosse program from Division III to Division I.

Three other Division I institutions upgraded their football programs. Monmouth College (New Jersey) and Robert Morris College added football and will play at the Division I-AA level. Northeast Louisiana University moved its football program from Division I-AA to I-A.

Adelphi University's women's softball program was granted permission to move from Division I to Division II, where the rest of the school's program is sponsored — except for men's soccer, which is Division I.

Chapman University moved its Division II program (baseball was classified in Division I) to Division III, and Hardin-Simmons University moved its entire program from Division II to III.

The petition that was approved effective September 1, 1995, was for Hampton University, which will move its entire program from Division II to Division I-AA.

American University of Puerto Rico was denied in its petition to move its entire program from Division III to Division II.

Probationary membership

Probationary membership status is applied to an institution that fails to meet the minimum men's or women's sports-sponsorship criterion for its division. The one-year probationary period can be applied to an institution only once in a 10-year period.

The following institutions were assigned probationary membership for all sports: Emerson College-Massachusetts College of Art, Fontbonne College, Hilbert College, Idaho State University and the University of Montana.

Restricted membership is applied to an institution that fails to meet the minimum requirements of its division (such as sports sponsorship and scheduling).

Probationary-membership status was removed in all sports for Coppin State College; Defiance College; the University of North Carolina, Asheville; and the University of Tennessee at Martin.

Restricted membership

An institution placed in the restricted-membership classification loses eligibility for a number of membership privileges and has from one to three years to comply. If the institution fails to comply in the required time period, it is reclassified as a corresponding member.

Seven schools were assigned to restricted classification in all sports. They are Alabama State University, Georgia State University, Northeastern Illinois University, College of Notre Dame (California), Tennessee-Martin, Tennessee State University and Webster University.

Three schools were assigned to restricted status in football only. They are Kentucky Wesleyan College, Quincy University and St. Mary's College (California).

Others assigned to restricted status include Alcorn State University in women's tennis; Chapman in men's and women's basketball; University of Colorado, Boulder, in men's and women's indoor track and women's outdoor track; Florida Atlantic University in men's tennis; Hardin-Simmons in football and men's and women's basketball; Jacksonville University in men's and women's crew; Limestone College in men's basketball; North Carolina-Asheville in women's tennis; St. Louis University in women's softball; San Diego State University in men's and women's cross country and women's outdoor track; Western Carolina University in women's tennis; Wiley College in men's basketball; and University of Wisconsin, Green Bay, in men's golf.

Restricted-membership status was removed for State University of New York at Buffalo, Charleston Southern University, Hofstra University and Salve Regina University in football only; for Davidson College in football and women's basketball; and for Davis and Elkins College; University of Minnesota, Duluth; Pfeiffer College; and Winona State University in men's basketball.
